SCORE

Composer's note

old people in the wrong house (dancing with robots) is made of two elements of unequal importance. The principal element is a slippage between what I would call 'meditative' and 'mechanical' modes of activity. Delicate patterns repeat while absorbing errant sounds, forming music on the border between these two modes. There's a metaphor here: the musical stream as a stream of consciousness. What belongs to consciousness, and what is an external object that it perceives? The title, old people in the wrong house (dancing with robots), arose when I was thinking about the meditative and the mechanical in connection with E.T.A. Hoffmann's short story, 'The Sandman', in which a young man falls in love with a robot girl. This story offers myriad perspectives on the mind, the unconsciousness, and on feeling at home. Beyond that it offers a unique opportunity to see an uncanny link between robots and laughter. And so the second element of this piece is mimesis of laughter.

This musical score page contains measures 236, 237, and 238. The instrumentation includes Piccolo, Oboe, Clarinet, Bass Clarinet, Contrabassoon, Horn, Trumpet, Trombone, Percussion, Piano, Violin 1, Violin 2, Viola, Violoncello, and Double Bass. The score is written for a symphony orchestra. Measures 236 and 237 feature complex woodwind and string passages with many beamed sixteenth and thirty-second notes. Measure 238 continues these patterns with some changes in articulation and dynamics. The piano part has a dense texture with many chords and moving lines. The brass section has more sustained notes and some melodic fragments. The percussion part is mostly silent, with some light effects indicated by short horizontal lines. The string section provides a rich harmonic and rhythmic foundation with various bowing techniques indicated by slurs and accents.
